(2) Conservation status: data insufficient

The hunters and the hunted

On April 1 the International Court of Justice in The Hague ordered Japan to stop whaling in the Southern Ocean Whale Sanctuary around Antarctica. Japan maintains that many whale species are not endangered, and last month Prime Minister Shinzo Abe vowed to "increase efforts" to resume commercial whaling.

Net finish time

In the long run

(2015 revision)

By Cedric Sam

This year's Standard Chartered Hong Kong Marathon was won on Sunday morning by Ethiopia's Sentayehu Merga Ejigu in 2:12:59 (net time), almost 2 minutes better than the best score in 2014. In the women's competition, Kim Hye-gyong of North Korea broke the domination of Africans by winning in 2:31:46. We reprise our 2014 graphic and again trace the milestones of the marathon challenge, the toughest among the event's races, from the firing gun to the last second. (Published On 2015-01-26)

Can You Live on the Minimum Wage?

By JEREMY ASHKENAS FEB. 8, 2014

More than 4.8 million workers now earn the lowest legal pay. This calculator, for a single childless worker, shows the hard choices that have to be made living on the smallest paychecks.

Start by choosing your state:

The minimum wage in New York is $8.00 an hour. Tally your living expenses by entering what you think is the least you need for each item. You may find that even your rock-bottom expenses aren't met and that you have to work more hours, pay your bills late, borrow money or do without. Related Editorial »

Day confidently rolled in having just given birth to her daughter a mere four days earlier ("VO is fantastic —nobody is going to judge me for wearing maternity clothes!") She wasn't prepared for what was about to hit her.

Ivona, a Polish text-to-speech company, was creating a computerized voice that would be incorporated into the Kindle Fire, the mini version of Amazon's popular reader tablet. When Kindle Fire owners clicked a setting, they'd be able to hear some of their books read to them by "Salli."

For six to seven hours a day, for eight days, Day read passages from Alice in Wonderland, bits of news off the AP wire, and sometimes random sentences, sitting as still in her chair as possible. She read hundreds of numbers, in different cadences. "One! One. One? Two! Two. Two?"

"It was like the Ironman of VO," says Day. "I had not experienced anything like that. I am the queen of the 30–60 second TV spot. That's my safe place." She had to take a break after the fourth day, because she had gone hoarse. But then Day soldiered on, and became the voice of many a breezy beach read.

FOR EVERY SIRI, THERE'S AN ACTOR SITTING IN A SOUND BOOTH, REALLY NEEDING TO GO TO THE BATHROOM

Day's experience is becoming increasingly common, as talking devices gain a commercial foothold. No longer a novelty, or something marketed primarily to the disabled, speaking gadgets, a la Siri, GPS systems, and text-to-speech enabled apps, are on the rise. It's easy to see the necessity: when you're driving you can't Google, so you ask your phone to find a Starbucks. You're at the gym; you have your RSS reader reading your financial news to you. Google, Apple, Microsoft, and even Amazon have all invested heavily in speech, and many Greenland or right-whale, he is the best existing authority. But Scoresby knew nothing and says nothing of the great sperm whale, compared with which the Greenland whale is almost unworthy mentioning. And here be it said, that the Greenland whale is an usurper upon the throne of the seas. He is not even by any means the largest of the whales. Yet, owing to the long priority of his claims, and the profound ignorance which, till some seventy years back, invested the then fabulous or utterly unknown sperm-whale, and which ignorance to this present day still reigns in all but some few scientific retreats and whale-ports; this usurpation has been every way complete. Reference to nearly all the leviathanic allusions in the great poets of past days, will satisfy you that the Greenland whale, without one rival, was to them the monarch of the seas. But the time has at last come for a new proclamation. This is Charing Cross; hear ye! good people all,—the Greenland whale is deposed,—the great sperm whale now reigneth!

There are only two books in being which at all pretend to put the living sperm whale before you, and at the same time, in the remotest degree succeed in the attempt. Those books are Beale's and Bennett's; both in their time surgeons to English South-Sea whale-ships, and both exact and reliable men. The original matter touching the sperm whale to be found in their volumes is necessarily small; but so far as it goes, it is of excellent quality, though

Stacking Up the Administration's Drone Claims

Administration officials—often unnamed—frequently seem to celebrate drone strikes that kill suspected militants. But the administration has also worked against disclosures of less positive aspects of the CIA's program, including how many civilians have been killed. We've laid out four years of statements by current and former officials discussing the CIA's drone program, both on and off the record. (Most of these stories also include a "no comment" from the CIA or the White House.)

Highlighted in red are the CIA's legal stances refusing to even acknowledge the program in response to Freedom of Information Act requests. | Related: How the Gov't Talks About a Drone Program it Won't Acknowledge Exists

"It's hard to win a pennant, but it's harder losing one."

— Chuck Tanner

The Eephus League began as a student project, an answer to a question. How could I create a project about baseball, yet still have a directed focus for the content? How could I distill the ethos of the game into a core idea for a website and community? I loved the design of baseball, the vernacular, the printed ephemera, but I needed a common thread to tie it together, and I finally found it in Minutiae. Baseball is a massive entity, steeped in equations, history, and tradition, but it's the small things that emerge in and because of baseball that I love. The Eephus League website serves as a celebration of the spirit of baseball and what it has given us over the past 150 years.

This Eephus League online magazine is a further commemoration of baseball's beauty, oddities and wonderful fans. Through this publication I hope to delve deeper into the nooks and crannies of our game, and preserve these small pieces of triviality lovingly and permanently. It is as much a tribute to the game itself as to its enormous and diverse group of fans. Much of the content inside was generated by passionate and talented fans, expressing their love of the game in infinitely unique and personal ways. Baseball touches each of us in different ways, and in turn the manners in which we

Questions of Strategy As Griffin Has Surgery

By JUAN BATTISTA

Washington Redskins quarterback Robert Griffin III had no known ligaments surgically repaired Wednesday — including a reconstruction of the anterior cruciate ligament and a repair of a tear in the lateral collateral ligament — the result of a noncontact injury he suffered during Sunday's playoff loss to the Seattle Seahawks.

The injury puts the availability of Griffin, a leading candidate for one of the top three picks next month, into doubt and casts new questions whether his dynamic style of play can, or should, be continued when he returns.

In addition, Griffin's A.C.L. had to be reconstructed; the first was when he ran at Baylor in 2009. It is unclear how long his recovery will take, but the loss in the L.C.L. is considered by doctors to be a serious complication that could extend the time frame for his return well past the start of the 2013 season.

Dr. James Andrews, the highly regarded orthopedic surgeon who operated on Griffin — and is also a Redskins team doctor — said in a news release that "he may never fully expect a full recovery, and it is everybody's hope and belief that due to Robert's high motivation, he will be ready for the start of the season."

He added: "The goal of his treatment is to give him the best opportunity for a long professional career."

It is not clear if Griffin will be ready for the start of the season in September, a timetable that might be overly optimistic. Minnesota Vikings tight end Jason Witten tore his A.C.L. last December, was ready for the Entomologist Richard Karban knows how to get sagebrush talking. To start the conversation, he poses as a grasshopper or a chewing beetle—he uses scissors to cut leaves on one of the shrubs. Lopping off the leaves entirely won't fool the plants. So he makes many snips around the edges and tips of the leaves—"a lot of little bites."

A few months later, Karban, a professor at the University of California, Davis who studies plant
